

Judging criteria for people with disabilities craftwork competition at the Narrogin Agricultural Show should prioritize inclusivity, creativity, effort, and individual expression.:

1. Creativity and Originality: Judges will assess the level of creativity and originality demonstrated in the craftwork
2. Effort and Skill: The effort and skill involved in creating the craftwork will be evaluated. Judges may consider factors such as the level of difficulty of the craft, the use of different materials or techniques, and the perseverance shown by the participant.
3. Accessibility: Entries that demonstrate accessibility considerations, such as adaptive tools or modifications that enable participation and enhance the quality of the craftwork.
4. Use of Materials: Judges may consider how effectively and creatively the materials have been used. This includes the choice of materials, their quality, and how well they complement the overall design of the craftwork.
5. Technique and Execution: The technical skill and execution of the craftwork will be evaluated. Judges may consider factors such as precision, neatness, attention to detail, and overall craftsmanship.
6. Expression and Storytelling: Craftwork that conveys a meaningful story, personal expression, or cultural significance. Judges will appreciate entries that reflect the participant's unique perspective and experiences.
7. Adherence to Theme (if applicable): If there's a specific theme for the competition, judges will consider how well the craftwork aligns with the theme.
8. Practicality and Functionality (if applicable): For craft items that serve a functional purpose, judges may evaluate how well the item fulfills its intended function while maintaining aesthetic appeal and quality craftsmanship.
9. Presentation: The presentation of the craftwork is important. Judges will consider factors such as cleanliness, arrangement, labelling (if applicable), and overall attractiveness of the display.
10. Overall Impression: Judges will consider the overall impression of the craftwork, taking into account all the above criteria to determine how well-rounded, expressive, and impactful the entry is compared to others.

These criteria aim to create a supportive and inclusive environment for participants with disabilities, allowing them to showcase their talents, creativity, and unique perspectives through craftwork while recognizing their efforts and achievements.
